DOCUMENTARY DALIA

A Child's Journey Around the World to Protect Our Planet and its Children

"I have a dream...

I imagine that all the children of the world will throw away their fathers' guns, swords, and traps, that all weapons will become cameras, that all fear will become harmony

I imagine that scientists can create many magic formulas to help us coexist with the animals of the savannah and the forests, and that one day many children like me will not only see cheetahs, lions, rhinos, and tigers in books, but thriving in their home... Mother Nature. Come with me on this wonderful adventure to restore hope for a better world"

Documentary Dalia is a global documentary project following a 10-year-old child, Dalia, as she travels the world to witness firsthand the decline of wildlife and forests.

Through powerful storytelling made for children and youth, the project aims to:

- Give a voice to endangered species and threatened forests
- Sensitize about wildlife exploitation and traffic
- Inspire children and families to become active protectors of nature
- Build a global movement of young conservationists

This is not just a documentary series – it is a growing environmental movement led by children.

- Emotional connection leads to meaningful action

Our vision is to create a generation of young “Wildlife & Forest conservationist” who actively support conservation efforts worldwide, especially with critically endangered species and disappearing forests.
